The towers are the central focus, with the surrounding cityscape and the Hudson River visible in the background. A large, semi-circular orange and yellow gradient is overlaid on the top half of the image, suggesting a rising or setting sun. Today, we gather with open hearts to reflect on faith as a quiet foundation for daily life, a source of direction, and a reminder that every step can be taken with God in mind.

THE SABBATH

Rooted faith may not always appear loud or visible. It can be present in patience, prayer, humility, and the willingness to keep walking when the next step is still unfolding.

The background image shows the ruins of the Temple of Apollo in Side, Turkey. The temple is a large, multi-story structure with many columns, some of which are still standing. The sky is a mix of orange, pink, and purple, indicating sunset. The ruins are made of light-colored stone and are surrounded by other ancient structures and walls. The overall scene is a historical and archaeological site.

In Ephesians chapter 2, the apostle Paul writes to a congregation that was struggling with cultural division.
